Ben LaFrombois focuses his practice on mergers and acquisitions, corporate governance, commercial finance, commercial real estate development, and business succession planning. Ben has led the development of private and public strategic initiatives, such as convention center development and regional distribution centers.

For individual clients he advises on transfers of wealth, tax savings, marital property and charitable planning.

Ben has significant experience in the food and agricultural industries at the retail, distribution and production levels including food marketing and labeling, logistics (warehousing and transportation), inventory management and financing with an emphasis on the dairy industry. He also has significant experience with corporate governance, deal structures and the financing of businesses.

Ben is an avid speaker on business issues as they relate to law and finance; management and strategic direction of multi-disciplinary projects, including mergers and acquisitions; and management of private and public strategic initiatives, such as convention center development and regional distribution centers. Recent and future speaking engagements include educational seminars for local governments, the State Bar of Wisconsin, the National Business Institute (NBI) and Strafford Educational Services.

Ben is a member of the State Bar of Wisconsin. He is a member of the Board of Directors of The Building for Kids, Inc. children's museum and The Community Blood Center.
